KING AND COUNTESS.

My Lady of Warwick to Be Edward VII.'s Chief Adviser.

Arrangement May Mean Much Good for the Country—Premier Salis-bury's Retirement Cannot Be Long Delayed.

With a view of getting a line on the direction in which King Edward VII. is likely to influence public life, many persons in a position to speak with such authority as is possible on the question have been interviewed.
It is a surprise to find an agreement among the best authorities that no one is likely to influence the king so much in public matters as the countess of Warwick. The common impression has been that their friendship had waned, but it is stated that the king entertains the highest respect for the countess of Warwick's ability and sagacity; that he frequently consults her on difficulties he encountered in guiding his public conduct; in fact, that there is no one for whose judgment he entertains a higher opinion.

This really shows his discernment, says the New York World, for there is no woman of her rank and few others before the English public with more brains, energy or liberality of view than the countess. In fact, she is strongly inclined to radicalism, or, as she probably would call it, tory democracy.

Of late years the countess has applied herself to all manner of good work, especially directed toward bettering the condition of that most neglected and backward class of the English community, the agricultural laborer and small farmer.

The work she has been doing for Warwickshire and adjoining counties has been imitated by the king's direction in Norfolk with considerable success, but, lacking, as it does, the guiding hand of a woman both of intellect and good feeling, it cannot compare with what the countess has effected within her own sphere.

Premier Salisbury's absence from MARQUIS OF SALISBURY.

(British Premier Said to Be at Odds with King Edward VII.)

his post at Queen Victoria's bedside during her last hours has been made the subject of a semi-official explanation. The explanation is that the prince of Wales excused the premier from going, owing to the latter's indifferent health. But Lord Salisbury's health is now notoriously better than for some years, and anyone who observed him the other day in the house of lords could see that he was quite hale, alert and vigorous. He was by far the least affected by the sad occurrence of any speaker in either house during the vote of condolence proceedings.

It is also interesting to recall that when Lord Salisbury was summoned to London from Hatfield house when the queen's condition was grave it was stated on his behalf in the press "under no circumstances is Lord Salisbury going to Osborne house"—a form of announcement which has strong significance in view of the rumors now current in the best informed circles respecting his relations with the king.

A privy councillor present at the proclamation council states, in reply to inquiries, that the king and Lord Salisbury only saluted each other most perfunctorily, and that the duke of Devonshire (the lord president of the council) was the intermediary between the king and the council throughout the ceremonial. This has given rise to the impression that when Lord Salisbury retires the king will be able to persuade the duke of Devonshire to take the premiership, something the queen failed to do on two occasions.

The Times, too, has gone out of its way to tell the king that Lord Salisbury is the only possible prime minister, evidently fearing that a rupture will take place immediately, thus adding to the general confusion and trouble of the cabinet and country.
But it is unlikely a change can be delayed long.

There is no doubt that the cause of the estrangement is, as stated before, Lord Salisbury spoke seriously to the prince of Wales about his mode of life and adjured him to surround himself no longer by the most lax, frivolous and brainless set in English society.

THE STRUGGLING AUTHOR.

Barrier That Only Made Him More Persistent in His Work.

"Really and truly," said the struggling young author, to a writer for the New York Sun, "the only thing that I have encountered in my experience thus far that might even tend to discourage me in my efforts is just one single word that I find written—and that I am sure with the kindest intention in the world—upon the courteously worded printed form that accompanies the rejected manuscripts that I get back from one publishing establishment.

"This kindly meant but ominous word is: 'Overstocked.'"

"Everything that I have sent them, for now about two years, has come back with a rejection form marked 'overstocked.' The first time I got one thus marked I said to myself: 'All right. If you are overstocked in that line of goods I'll send you something else.' But I rather liked the word, and I was pleased that they should take the trouble to write something on a form sent to me. And this word that was written, so far from seeming to imply that my stuff was not good seemed to say that it was good; for were they not already overstocked with such matter? Had they not been so drawn to it, by its attractiveness and desirableness, that they had bought of it actually more than they required for current consumption? So, on the whole, I found reason for pleasure in this rejection; and, I sent them something else.

"In due time this came back; and written on the rejection blank was the word 'overstocked'; they had already on hand more than they wanted of that line of goods, too. And so I sent them something else, and in due time that came back; and what's this marked on the card? 'Overstocked.' And, not to burden you with details, everything that I've sent them for two years has come back with the blank containing besides the formula the written word 'overstocked.'"

"They are overstocked in everything, apparently. I've tried them on psychology and physiology; on humor, wit and pathos; on astrology, biology and demonology; on paleontology, geology, conchology and zoology; on all manner of subjects, indeed, on everything that one could think of, but they are overstocked in all.

"Well, now, you know, that being the case, it might seem as though further effort on my part in my chosen direction would be a waste of time; that now would be the time for me to turn to the woodpile and take up the saw; that wood sawing, and not literature, was my true vocation; but I do not so interpret the sign. On the contrary, I am only the more stimulated by it. I must give them things so good that that word cannot apply."

AS WILLIE UNDERSTOOD IT.

Discouraging Attempt of a Teacher to Correct the Slang Habit.

Little Willie had developed the bad habit of using a great deal of unnecessary slang. He goes to school in Brooklyn, so, of course, his teacher sought to correct him of this habit.
He had been overheard using the word "chump" very frequently. The teacher kept him after school and started in to impress upon him how useless the word was from the fact that, as he confidently expected, Willie didn't know what the word meant.

"Now, Willie," said the teacher in smooth, friendly tones, "what is a chump?"

"I dunno, except that it's a schoolteacher, for one thing."

"A school-teacher!" exclaimed the astonished pedagogue. "What makes you think that 'chump' means a school-teacher?"

"O, 'cause the other day when I told pa about you lickin' me for hit-tin' Johnnie Green, he said you was a chump," replied Willie with some hesitancy.—Brockton Enterprise.

The Exposition Flag.

The official flag of the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo was selected from 300 designs, and is the production of a young lady, Miss Adelaide J. Thorpe. In the upper corner is a single white star, on a blue field, typifying North America; on a red field, in the opposite corner, are four stars, representing the southern cross constellation and South America. The center of the flag is a diagonal white bar, bearing the golden eagle of liberty, with a green scroll in its talons, inscribed: "Pax, 1901."
